CHILDREN from Msunduzi and surrounding areas yet again benefitted from the generosity of a Liswati based in the United States of America (California).

Terrence Zwane provided them with lunch in an initiative dubbed 'Sharing is caring'.

Zwane, who is usually in the country during the festive season, catered for 200 children where he, with the help of health motivators, community police and his mother Zodwa Gama, prepared a mouth-watering meal for the children.

This is the third time Zwane demonstrates such a good gesture.

Zwane narrated that he moved to California in 2009 and after getting employed as a legal practitioner.

He decided to make it a habit to save money so he could make the much needed contribution to his childhood community.

"I do not have money but I have made it a point that whenever I get paid I save the little I get for the less privileged."

He said this initiative was a way of spreading hope, peace and love in the community.

Zwane said he was also happy with the work done by community police of his home area.

"I did assist the community police with the little I had and I have been
